Do you think that education for incarcerated people is a matter of urgency and justice?

If so, think about applying to be an intern with the Education Justice Program (EJP), a unit of the College of Education. EJP offers academic programs to men incarcerated at Danville Correctional Center. The core of these programs are upper-division, for-credit courses, taught at the prison by Illinois faculty and advanced graduate students. EJP also addresses issues related to re-entry and the collateral impacts of incarceration on families and communities through its outreach program FACE. You can learn more about our work at www.educationjustice.net.

The internship position, which is based in EJP’s Urbana campus office, is a great opportunity to get involved with the day-to-day workings of a model college-in-prison program. Interns work directly with and are supervised by EJP’s operations manager, Katie Fizdale. We ask that interns work a minimum of 8 hours each week during our office hours, which are from 9 – 5pm, M-F. The responsibilities and tasks that interns might take on vary greatly, depending on the current needs of EJP and the interests of the intern. Some examples of past projects include setting up EJP’s archives, database work, re-organizing office spaces, preparing teaching presentations for EJP instructors, helping with special events, and doing mass mailings.

We are seeking someone who has a commitment to social justice, eagerness to help with EJP’s different programs, and is willing to work as part of team.

To apply please email a letter of interest and your CV to Katie Fizdale fizdale@illinois.edu.

Thank you for your interest in EJP!
